Textbooks

(specific chapters from these books will be indicated as reading assignment every week)

- International law / Vaughan Lowe OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, 2007.
A concise introduction to international law for "a student to read in the vacation before starting to study the subject, or for an interested lay reader" (from the preface of the book).
[BA83272715]

- International law / Antonio Cassese [2nd ed] OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, 2005.
A text written in a simple language, making the principal ideas of international law accessible to all. The only drawback is that it is slightly old.

Reference books (Further reading options)

- International law / Malcolm N. Shaw Cambridge University Press, 2017.
A very detailed textbook of over 900 pages. It is well-organized, and is frequently used in classes for graduate and undergraduate students in the U.K.
[BB24561783]

- International law / Jan Klabbers [2nd ed] Cambridge University Press, 2017.
For those who wish to read something thoroughly updated and contemporary. The first edition, 2013, is also available in the library. You need to be familiar with a good number of judicial cases to appreciate this textbook, as it makes a generous use of those cases to illustrate its arguments.
